Report,

To be honest with you, I couldn't really be bothered to write up this match, I was too upset by the dreadful injury sustained on the pitch. Bikeshop's injury towards the end of the first half was a traumatising experience for Zwack, losing this season's best player to severely damaged ankle ligaments which required a trip to A&E and a cast on his foot for a week. It was perhaps fortunate that the referee from the other game had arrived early and had no match to oversee on the neighbouring pitch as he was happy to play in goal for the Zwack, an invitation that so many others can only dream of.

As has become standard this season Zwack had good chances and probably deserved a bit more than they got but the killer finish was lacking and the final ball was often off target. Capello, spurred on by Matt Tree of the Oak's comical mocking of Zwack's recent poor results, came out of goal in the second half and tried to rally the troops with some suicidal long runs from the back but as per usual his finishing was severely lacking. The Pocket Rocket was his usual self, lively in midfield but often finding himself isolated up front with Lightning tightly marked. Magnet too was given a bit of space on the left and got off a few decent shots without managing to chalk up another goal to his tally. Veteran and Protein held the fort at the back with the Veteran pushing forward at the end and coming close but never beating the keeper.

Overall, a disappointing result for Zwack who could have won if they hadn't lost their star player to injury.
